Naughten promotes FG solution on jobs

Unlike the banks, people don't want 'a bail-out' but instead need 'a hand-up' and that is what you can expect from the next Fine Gael Government, the party's Economic & Business Chairperson, Denis Naughten TD, told the Fine Gael National Conference in Killarney recently. Fine Gael says up to 2,000 jobs can be created in counties Roscommon and Leitrim through the New ERA jobs plan.

Denis Naughten, who leads Fine Gael's key economic think tank, said: "Our job stimulus plan will create 105,000 new jobs nationally and will lay the foundations for future long-term economic and employment growth by investing in key infrastructure which will once again make the Irish economy one of the most competitive in Europe. We will bring high-speed broadband to one million homes throughout the country, we will invest in our water network to ensure that when you turn on the tap you have water and that it is safe to drink and we will produce half of our electricity from renewable energy within ten years.

"We also want to get Government working for business by putting strategies in place that can support existing jobs and create new ones such as our plan to give businesses and their staff a much-needed boost by cutting employers' PRSI, saving on wage bills without cutting wages. Our plans for those under-25 set a target of reducing the numbers of young people signing on the Live Register by one third over the next year and ensuring that young people who are not in work, education and training do not become a lost generation, but instead are provided with the skills and tools they need."
