Ballet school's website launch

McDermott School of Classical Ballet and Dance launched their new logo and website to a great turnout of over 60 students, parents and friends last Friday night at the BG Dance Studio on Racecourse Rd.

Mother and daughter team Ruth and Trisha McDermott have come together to re-brand the ballet school formerly known as the Roscommon School of Classical Ballet and to build on the school's reputation as a highly regarded centre for classical dance training.

Trisha has returned to Roscommon from London where she trained at the Royal Academy of Dance for three years. She has joined forces with Ruth who has established her ballet school as one of the most successful schools in Ireland and together they will offer young Roscommon people the opportunity to study the Royal Academy of Dance's grades and vocational syllabus taught to the highest possible standards. Most students attend their ballet class once a week and for the more interested and talented students the chance to take further training and study the Academy's vocational syllabus is also provided.

"The new website will allow parents and students to access all the information they might need to know about the ballet school. Classes and timetables, holidays and location of classes are easily found on the site and we will be able to keep parents updated on school events, examinations, shows even to where to purchase uniform," stated Ruth.

Ruth and Trisha can also be contacted on (090) 66 27033. Please visit McDermott School of Classical Ballet & Dance at www.mcdermottballetschool.com
