loy's Artisan Bakery and Fine Food Emporium added a local producer of pesto, tapenades and red onion jam to its list of producers and tastings of these new products are now available in the store.

Molloy's supporting the Rossies

If you are making the journey to Dublin on Sunday, then make sure to get all your food supplies from Molloy's Artisan Bakery and Fine Food Emporium before you leave and start supporting the Rossies by supporting your local Roscommon bakery.

Delight your family by purchasing a pound of ham at Molloy's, and you will receive a ridge pan at half price, perfect for making delicious sandwiches. Then choose from one of the mouth-watering salads, chutneys or relishes to provide the perfect accompaniment to your gourmet sandwich. Then surprise the Rossie travellers when you produce Molloy's trademark cup cakes, expertly decorated in the Roscommon colours for the weekend that's in it!

The Molloy family have supported Roscommon for generations and the shop is a great place for the banter that surrounds the build-up to a Roscommon game. To mark the quarter final, the store will be decked out in the primrose and blue this weekend, with lots of special offers in both the bakery and the coffee shop on Friday and Saturday, while stocks last.

Help for allergy sufferers

Sufferers from allergies of different types will know the difficulty of sourcing allergen-free foods, well now help is at hand in sourcing your food from Molloy's Artisan Bakery and Fine Food Emporium in Abbeystown.

Molloy's has teamed up with at least one local allergy specialist to help allergy sufferers source a range of products and also to have in-house products for people with special food requirements.

"One item that is selling out is fresh pasta," reports Declan Molloy. "We have organic pasta and pasta sauces and the old reliable wheat-free bread, which is wheat, yeast and dairy free, but customers should be aware that this is not gluten-free.
