Alan Gallagher cycle raises funds for Brainwave

The Alan Gallagher cycle from Cork to Roscommon which took place recently, raised over €1,000 for Brainwave, the Irish Epilepsy Association.

Kevin Gallagher recently cycled from Cork to Roscommon in early May as part of the 'Alan Gallagher Memorial Cycle' in aid of Brainwave and raised €1165. Alan was a well-liked and much respected young man from Roscommon, with a keen interest in cycling who sadly passed away unexpectedly in 2009 as a result of his epilepsy. His friends and family decided to honour his memory by staging a fundraising cycle from Cork, where Alan went to college to Roscommon, his home town.

Epilepsy is a neurological condition that affects 37,000 people in Ireland and which is responsible for 60-80 deaths each year. All proceeds were donated to Brainwave to support its work providing information and support to people with epilepsy and their families.
