Declan Nerney at Tuesday's race dance

Declan Nerney and his band will be in the Abbey Hotel, Roscommon, on Tuesday 3rd August for the Race Dance, where he will be performing some of his new singles, 'My Hero Lies in Cookstown' and 'Lonesome 77203'.

These new songs will be on Declan's new forthcoming album to be released later this summer, which also includes a fantastic song all about Co. Roscommon. It's no secret that Declan Nerney got his influences from the great Stars of the Show Band scene, and the famous song the 'Marquee in Drumlish' surely depicts and displays this in its totality.

Declan will be kicking off this year's 'Marquee in Drumlish' on Friday 20th August 2010, joining Declan in the Marquee will be his gorgeous niece Una Healy from the sensational all-girl band The Saturdays, Una makes no secret that her uncle and godfather Declan has influenced and guided her throughout the years with her singing and songwriting and how Declan has helped her achieve her goals to date.

Solarus rocks Roscommon

Solarus, a classic rock, metal band whose influences include Zeppelin, Metallica and Hendrix, will be bringing their talents to Roscommon Arts Centre on Saturday 4th September.

Front man Lyle Dove is not shy in coming forward, engaging with the audience through his energetic performance. Andrew Hanley powers away on lead guitar banging out classic rock riffs only to be complemented by Benjamin Stratford's strong and steady base lines.

Solarus comes together with the drumming prowess of Paul Costello who commands his kit to give it up with such skill and determination. Solarus started out playing covers, jamming together at every opportunity and they rocked the house playing a great set at the Phil Lynott tribute night at Roscommon Arts Centre earlier this year and recently played support to signed band The Urges when they again rocked the house with some of their own original material. For rock fans this is not a night to be missed!

Early bird tickets €10 offer closes 28th of August. Standard ticket €13. To reserve tickets please call (090) 66 25824.
